Christmas Day In Rome

Today is a quiet and rest day for me, no tours. I did take a short walk to the Spanish Steps, a few stores were open but most of them are closed, I guess it all depends on your religion. Three of the staff brought me a few gifts and to wish me a Merry Christmas, that was very nice. Picture of a Christmas Tree downstairs and the tree at the Vatican.

The Spanish Steps in Rome - Piazza di Spagna

The 'Spanish steps' in Rome, built in Rococo style between 1723 and 1726, are the steps that lead from the Piazza di Spagna square to the French monastery ...
