Buenos Aires, Argentina

Buenos Aires is Argentina's big, (16 Million People) cosmopolitan capital city. Its center is the Plaza de Mayo, lined with stately 19th-century buildings including Casa Rosada, the iconic, balconied presidential palace. Other major attractions include Teatro Colon, a grand 1908 opera house with nearly 2,500 seats and the modern MALBA museum, displaying Latin American Art.

We literally docked in the dock yard this morning. We are not allowed to walk in the port area. The port authorities have provided a free and continuous shuttle bus service from the ship to the exit of the port during our entire stay in Buenos Aires all day and night long. This works out great.

I had scheduled a bus excursion with a panoramic drive around the downtown area today and I got a notice from the ship that it had been canceled and rescheduled for tomorrow so I decided to take a taxi and go to their largest mall. I was looking for white shorts, in hawaii before I left none were to be found, I couldn't even find them on line so I though the Souther Hemisphere will be in summer surely I can find them here, I spent 4 hours in the mall went to every floor and every mans store and nothing. Lots of display of women's white clothing but not one man's store had white shorts. I think that during the pandemic the Egyptian cotton mills must have shut down and perhaps haven't reopened. I've decided to give up looking and try next year. I found the local people to be charming, not pushy or rude, it was a very pleasant day.

Galerias Pacifico

For the evening entertainment they brought a local Tango Group on to perform. I know nothing about the Tango or it's music but I thought this was the best show so far. The dancers and musicians were excellent.
