At Sea - Pitcairn Island

This morning we reached Pitcairn Island and some of the locals came out on a boat to the ship and set up their wares for sale on deck 13 by the pool for a few hours and in the meantime the Captain circled the Island first from the port side then turned around then sailed the starboard side so everyone on the ship could see the island. It looked like everyone on the ship turned out to purchase something.

Pitcairn, Henderson, Ducie and Oeno Islands

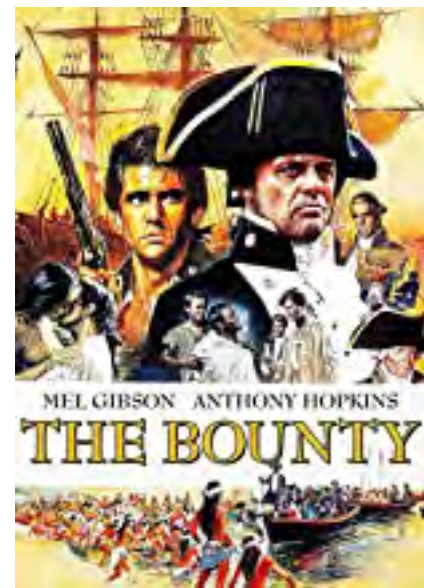

The Pitcairn Islands is a group of four volcanic islands in the south Pacific Ocean that form the sole British Overseas Territory in the Pacific Ocean Henderson Island accounts for 86% of the land area, but only Pitcairn Island is inhabited. The Islands nearest to the Pitcairn Islands are Mangareva (of French Polynesia) at 688 km to the west and Easter Island at 1,929 km to the east.

The Pitcairn Islanders are a biracial ethnic group descended mostly from nine Bounty mutineers and a handful of Tahitian consorts - as is still apparent from the surnames of many of the islanders. The mutiny and its aftermath have been the subject of many books and films.

Bounty Bay is an embayment of the Pacific Ocean into Pitcairn Island. It is named after the Bounty, a British naval vessel whose eighteenth-century mutiny was immortalized in the novel Mutiny on the Bounty, and the numerous subsequent motion pictures made of it. The mutineers sailed the Bounty to Pitcairn Island and destroyed it by fire in the bay.
