City

Tauranga

City in the North Island, New Zealand

Tauranga is a harbourside city in the Bay of Plenty region on New Zealand's North Island. It hosts historic buildings like the Elms Mission Station, an 1847 Georgian-style home. A bridge over the harbour connects Tauranga to Mount Maunganui, a beach town with hot saltwater pools and an extinct namesake volcano with winding walking paths. Offshore is the active volcano White Island, accessible by helicopter or boat. — Google

Tenor of the Pacific presents a masterful performance from around the world of popular classics.

My excursion was canceled again, not sure why so I took a Taxi around the island. Tauranga is beautiful, very clean. Home owners take a lot of pride in their property and everyone in the shops are very friendly and they speak english. I wish it was closer to the U.S., I would consider moving here. The best thing, I finally found a white pair of shorts ( they only had 1 pair) and some long sleeve t-shirts. I had a great day and would come back in a heart beat.
